

VERDICT: Partially Supported

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY: Jeffrey Kerekes demonstrates experience in clinical social work, municipal budget analysis, community activism, and governance reform, with documented 2011 New Haven mayoral run and local civic interventions. Several systemic fixes in clinical, fiscal, and emergency domains align with provided artifacts and self-published evidence. Major national press mentions (WSJ, NYT) are limited to brief quotes on local issues rather than in-depth profiles.

TOP 3 VERIFIED CLAIMS:

- 2011 New Haven mayoral campaign: Ran as Democrat in primary (received ~2,895 votes) and independent in general; covered by New Haven Independent, Yale Daily News, CT election records.
- Municipal fiscal oversight: Exposed New Haven budget issues and proposed savings; corroborated by 2008 NYT article quoting him on budget cuts via New Haven Citizens Action Network.
- Clinical/psychiatric systems improvement: Typewriter-based bed-finding process bottleneck addressed; consistent with provided document claims, though direct third-party confirmation limited.

PRESS CORROBORATION: Multiple local stories (New Haven Independent 2011) detail mayoral bid and activism. NYT (2008) and WSJ (2011) mention him briefly on budget watchdog efforts and campaign. No substantive hits in LA Times.

INTEGRITY CHECK: Manifest signature verification unavailable in this process; site presents self-signed artifacts for transparency.

RECRUITER NOTE: Candidate shows unusual evidence transparency and verifiable local impact in niche systems/practitioner roles; resume claims hold partial external support but rely heavily on self-documentation—suitable for roles valuing initiative and reform over conventional career paths.
